When Mr. Taylor appeared before the ommittee and made an argument against he metric system he expressly explained as the did not appear as president of hisoclety, but as an individual. Therefore as society's influence cannot be recorded a hestile to the legislation.

It seems to have been inferred from the export of Mr. Littauer's statement before as Committee on Coinage, Weights and leasures yesterday that he said he used metric system in his glove factory, ir. Littauer said that in his own business e had been impressed with the ease of ilculation in declmais. After having out oves from skins by the dozens, an opation requiring pencil and paper for comtation, he changed to the system folwed by the Germans of doing this work hundreds and by tens, which greatly applified it. This shows, in his ophicinal that would be the value of a decimal trie system. But as yet he has not made thange to the metric system in his facting in every respect.
